THE CASE OF THE SHIP "MASONIC" CON-FISCATED IN MANILIA.

NEW YORK, 11th July. The Herald's Madrid special says - The papers here announce that Baron Blane, Italian Minister, has awarded Captain Blanchard, an American citizen, $51,600 on account of the ship Masonic. The case was submitted last month to Blane's arbitration by the Spanish Government and American Minister. Foster has scored a triumph in setting an affair twice referred to in Presidential message since 1878, and which became almost a source of international complication. LONDON, 17th July. A conference of the Empire Defence League was held this morning in the Mansion House. Lord Lennox presided, and the Mayors of many prominent towns were present. Resolutions were adopted which declared that the defensive resources of the empire were inadequate and urged the Government to strong then the pavy for the purpose of protecting the coast and to fortify colonial posts and coaling stations and appoint a commission to inquire into the relative strength of the British and foreign navies. A deputation of important citizens, headed by the Lord Mayor, called upon Lord George Hamilton, First Lord of the Admiralty, to-day and urged the necessity of strengthening the navy, and Lord George in reply said :- The Government intended to scoure the best professional opinion as to the actual condition of the navy. If these advisers decide that the navy is at preseat efficient the Government would give that assurance to the public to allay alarm. If on the other hand it should be found by these advisers that the nevy lacked in efficiency and that active steps, were necessary to strengthen it, the Government would not hesitate to ask Parliament for funds necessary to place England foremost among the maritime powers.

POST-OFFICE NOTICES.

Attention is invited to the following particulars on the subject of Local Delivery :-LOCAL DELIVERY.—No delivery is attempted on board Ship, at the Peak, Kowloon, Aberdeen, &c. nor at any private house (even though named in the address) when there is a place of business nonrer, at which delivery can be effected

(Postal Guide, par. 159). The above Regulation is not new, but has. been the invariable rule of the Post Office for many: years. Considerable efforts have been made to secure its being generally understood. To prevent, however, if possible, any further disappointment in the matter, it will appear permanently on the Mail Lists issued twice every day from the Daily Press Office.

When Correspondence has been mis-sent or delayed (both of which are liable to happen occasionally) all that the addresses need do is to note on the cover, Sont to ----, or Received at 7 p.m., or as the case may be, and forward it, without any other writing whatever, to the Postmaster-General. This should be acted on the first time cause of complaint occurs; it is a mistake to let such matters pass for fear of giving trouble, a course which generally gives more trouble in the and.

The Postal Guide for 1885, revised to date will be found in the Built Press Directory. p. 393 large edition. p. 657 small edition. This is the only anthorized complete Summary of Postal information published in Hongkong.

The authorised List of Mails issued in connection with this paper is the one published twice each day in our Extra, which is always corrected to a much later hour than that given

THE BURIED MOTHER. Out by the walls of a Danish town The graves stood cold as the night came down. The Angelus prayer had long been said, . And the bell telled out the psalm for the dead. It swong for a while from the darkening steeple. "Out of the depths," said priest and people. Through all the close-set town and towers The doors were shut for the silent hours. But a mother, buried for half a year Woke with a crying in her car. She rose with the vague sleep still in her head, And clad in the shroud that wraps the dead. She felt her long dead besom ache, For her seven children were all awake; She left the cold graves under the walls, And took the street to her husband's balls And none had broken them broad that night, Or poured them drink, or trimmed a light. And none land haid them pillow or sheet; The dust of the day was on their feet. Two streve for an empty cup, and one Was crying-that was her youngest son. -She washed and kissed them, and hashed their crie While tears pressed out of her long-dead oyes. But their father, who lay on a lower floor, itsed heard her step in the corridor. And he rose and came, and saw her stand - With the children chinging to either hand. She said: "The crying smote my heart; It broke my dreams of death apart, " I was loth to leave these seven. I died; But when have I slopt when the child has cried? " Take note, ere I pass to my many dead, Your children woke and had no broad,

Their style Le was not to the French taste, it was too I German. Their tendency was too democratic | L for the editors to trust them. The house of the "Inseparables" lies not far from the station, on the Boulevard du Nord. The villa lies half huried among chestnut trees r and beech, a little Tusculum, more German in appearance than French. The secret of how the two friends work together, and produce writings of such uniform texture, we will give in M. Erckmann's own words:-"Chatrian," he said, "goes every morning at nine to Paris and returns home every evening at six. I, however, am here day by day, from early till late, without leaving the house. You know the result. You will be disposed to undervalue the importance of Chatrian and his significance for myself and our labours, when I tell you that since we have worked together Chatrian has not once you have the whole secret of the unity of our style, which is not denied us, even by our most bitter opponents. There is, there can be no difference in style, for the style of all our united compositions is exclusively mine. Every evening after we have dined," continued Erckmann, " when the bonne has replenished our tankards with ale, we begin our work in common. I read over to Chatrian what I have written during the day. Chatrian | M possesses, in the highest degree, what may be termed the talent of composition. He has S almost invariably some corrections to make character with as much detail as my hero or heroine. Here Chatrian interferes. He has the critical faculty in him so keen, and so correct, that I am often amazed at it, and though he proceeds ruthlessly to work, slashing, arranging, recasting my work, I sit by without resentment, knowing that he is right and I am wrong. He is a master of grouping; he has a subtle eye for all the ramifications of a plot, he understands the relief in which the several characters are to stand. So we often sit together till midnight and after, pencil in one hand, note-book in the other, and exchange our thoughts half audibly. At one c'clock the housekeeper has orders to come in and tell us it is bedtime. If we do not stir, she puts the lamp out. Sometimes we are so full of our subject that we cannot go to bed, and we sit on till three o'clock, in the dark. If the housekeeper finds that we are not in bed at one o'clock rattle the fire-irons to drown our conversation, and drive our ideas out of our beads." S. BARING-GOULD, in Gentleman's Magazine. Emily Said Lord John Russell to Hume, at a social | Sooloo dinner. "What do you consider the object of Terpsichore
